A fine and most elegant Italian 19th century Louis XVI st. Alabaster statue of the three graces. The statue is raised by an oval base where the three graces stand, one wearing charming sandals. Each of the beautiful three graces, portrayed to be Euphrosyne, Aglaea and Thalia, are draped in detailed and flowing classical attire and have their hair tied with bows. The two graces on the outside are holding a fine floral wreath above the central grace's head while all dancing and holding hands.
