A most elegant French turn of the century Louis XVI st. gilt metal and glass coffee table by Maison Ramsay. The table is raised by delicate square tapered legs with fine ball feet with each leg connected by a most decorative curved and straight stretcher. Above is the glass top framed within an elegant mottled border.

Maison Ramsay was a French design house in the early twentieth century who created very decorative and stylish designs during this period. Maison Ramsay produced furniture and lighting, using a unique combination of materials and techniques, making their designs easily identifiable. Materials used included wonderful gilt wrought ironwork, deep colored lacquers on wood and glass surfaces.
