A striking Italian early 19th century Louis XIV st. ebony table. The table is raised by tapered legs joined by an H stretcher. The glorious table top is inlaid with ivory and mother of pearl bringing together the remarkable, yet restrained, flower and berry marquetry, thus emphasizing the central reserve medallion of Mercury on a chariot pulled by opened winded birds. Above is a family crest and below are eagles, with initials of most likely the cabinetmaker, each amidst two dragons. To the sides are two urns with dragon handles and flowers. At the front is a drawer with more delicate floral and berry marquetry with an ivory keyhole escutcheon. All original hardware.
